

Corporate Sponsors

Contributed by admin
Sunday, 09 November 2008

Do you have a dream or project that you cannot move on because of money? Instead of just giving up or waiting for "some day" when you do have more money, you may be able to get help today! In exchange for a little good will, many companies are quite willing to sponsor a variety of projects. If you do not take advantage of corporate sponsorship, then you could be missing out on a simple financial solution that many others are already taking advantage of!

Companies donate money for many different things. Amateur athletes, professional sporting events, research projects, travel, and education are just a few examples. This is not a loan, that you have to pay back. It is, basically, free money, that companies donate in return for a little publicity and good will. Enjoy your dream of promoting an amateur folk music festival or a professional tennis match with the help of corporate checks!

Teams and individuals obtain corporate money to help sponsor athletics, for instance. Long distance bicycle racers, student soccer teams, and figure skaters are examples of athletes who take advantage of sponsorship money. Companies provide money for training, uniforms, travel, and more. Instead of a team sponsorship, perhaps you would like to host a local golf or tennis match. Perhaps you want the match to raise funds for a charity, or even to make profit for yourself. Either way, companies will sponsor these type of events.

You have certainly seen race cars with corporate names on them. That is because the companies "sponsor" the cars. But you do not have to be world famous to obtain a sponsor. Many local and amateur organizations can find willing donors.

You do not need to hold an athletic event to obtain a sponsor. You could hold a local music festival, beauty pageant, or talent contest! Again, some groups hold these events to fund their activities or raise money for charity. However, some people make a full time living by promoting and organizing events. Imagine, making a living by doing what you really love, and by getting companies to sponsor you! You can learn how to attract eager corporate sponsors, even if you have never done it before!

Many companies provide money for education, and these are called educational sponsorships. The companies may use this sponsorship to promote good will for their business, or perhaps they hope to help train future employees. You can learn how to stay in school, courtesy of a corporate sponsorship. Again, this is donor money, and it is not a loan that you have to pay back! It is often fairly simple to apply for these programs, and the process is already in place to help people just like you if you know how to look for it!

A lack of seed money should not make you give up on your dreams or great ideas. Potential authors have found money to fund their books. Scholars find money to finance their research studies. Marathon runners find money to train and travel to their next event. You can step up for sponsor money too!